

People must be the greatest asset that an organization can possess. People deserve high standards of protection. It has been recognized that the most significant factor having influence over both the creation of those risks and the control of those risks is management.

Principles of Occupational Health Management Online Workshop

The Deep South Center for Occupational Health & Safety

OVERVIEW

We are very excited about offering this course in a web-based format. The modules will facilitate a broad understanding of the strategies used by successful managers within an occupational health setting. Upon completion of this course, participants should be able to explain the application of management principles and demonstrate knowledge needed to effectively plan, direct, implement, and evaluate programs and activities, through a short test at the end of each module.

WORKSHOP LENGTH

Participants will have four weeks from receiving log-in instructions from the Deep South Center to complete the modules.

TOPICS

- Introduction to Principles of Occupational Health Management
- The Strategic Planning Process: Achieving Healthcare Focus
- Introduction to Budgeting
- Marketing Occupational Health and Safety Services
- Effective Training Programs
